Welcome to the Seventh Taos Mountain Film Festival

Dear Festivarians,

Welcome to our seventh festival. Seven years ago I founded this event to celebrate the delight I glean from the world's remote places and to highlight the pressures imposed on those places by a crowded planet.

These seven years have been a majority of bliss and a modicum of stress. The festival is now established in the mountain community and it's now time for me to hand over the reins. My partner in crime Seth Bullington has taken the brunt of running the event this year while I have been out of town in pursuit of my career. Tremendous fresh energy has been brought in to the organization by programme director, Andy "Rosey" Rosenberg and Festival Manager, Charlie Gibbons. New personalities have re-energized our Board of Directors. The festival is healthy and has a momentum of its own.

I will remain on the board as Executive Director. Taos Mountain Film Festival will continue its tradition of taking a light-hearted approach to the mountain experience while using our platform to shed light on issues that threaten the wild terrain that we cherish.

Yours

Jonathan Slator, TMFF Founder & Executive Director
